How to Use the Field Trip Guide

We recommend taking as many field trips as possible to enhance your study of Tennessee History. In fact, we recommend taking field trips for many school subjects. The Field Trip Guide is an extensive listing of places to go and things to do in all of Tennessee's 95 counties. You can use it while you study Exploring Tennessee and every year you homeschool. It includes five sections:

1. The County Field Trip Guide. This first section includes information about field trips in each of Tennessee's 95 counties. It provides descriptions, addresses, and phone numbers for sites in each county. Each county listing has a state map with that county filled in to help you orient yourself.
2. Suggested Field Trips for Each Unit of Exploring Tennessee. Suggested field trips are listed for each of the thirty units of Exploring Tennessee. You will find the names of field trip sites and the counties in which they are located. Go back to the County Field Trip Guide to find descriptions, addresses, and phone numbers for the sites you would like to visit.
3. The Subject Guide. Look in this section for a list of field trips in various subject areas, such as the arts, science and technology, sports, music, etc. This guide can be used every year you home school, because field trips are listed in many subject areas. This section includes a list of places and the counties in which they are located. Go back to the County Field Trip Guide to find descriptions, addresses, and phone numbers for the sites you would like to visit.
4. Annual Events Guide. Find living history demonstrations, music festivals, and other educational events held annually across the state. These are listed by month or by season. At the beginning of each season or each month look in the guide to see what events your family would like to attend. This section includes a list of places and the counties in which they are located. Go back to the County Field Trip Guide to find descriptions, addresses, and phone numbers for the sites you would like to visit.
5. Tennessee Information Sources. Websites and offices with Tennessee information.

Start Locally

Perhaps you would like to begin by visiting the sites in your own county and then visiting sites in the counties near you. When you are visiting another part of the state, obtain a Tennessee road map that includes counties. Look at your route. See what counties touch or are near your route. Check the County Field Trip Guide section to see what sites are in the area. Check the Annual Events Guide to see if any special events are taking place there.

Call Ahead

We have tried to make the guide user-friendly and accurate. However, schedules and phone numbers do change. We suggest that you always call before you go. We also recommend that when you call, you ask workers at the site to tell you about what is available there so that you can be sure it is the kind of field trip you have in mind.

We have provided web links for many of the listings. Please use discretion as you surf the web. We are not responsible for the content of these sites or of sites to which they link. Keep your anti-virus software up-to-date!

Our Sources

The Field Trip Guide was developed primarily from information furnished by County Chambers of Commerce and Departments of Tourism and Economic Development. These organizations were kind and generous in providing information and encouragement for this project. We encourage you to visit or call the local Chamber of Commerce or government agency that provides county information. They can provide updated information to help you make the most of your visit to a different part of the state.

Natchez Trace Parkway

In the late 18th and early 19th centuries, settlers in the Ohio River Valley were floating their produce down the Mississippi River to New Orleans. They sold their flatboats for lumber, and the path now known as the Natchez Trace provided a good route back home. The introduction of steamboats encouraged return travel by river, and the Trace lost much of its traffic. Historic sites, trails, and picnic areas are located along the Natchez Trace, which passes through Davidson County.

Natchez Trace Parkway

In the late 18th and early 19th centuries, settlers in the Ohio River Valley were floating their produce down the Mississippi River to New Orleans. They sold their flatboats for lumber, and the path now known as the Natchez Trace provided a good route back home. The introduction of steamboats encouraged return travel by river, and the Trace lost much of its traffic. Historic sites, trails, and picnic areas are located along the Natchez Trace, which passes through Hickman County.

Natchez Trace Parkway

In the late 18th and early 19th centuries, settlers in the Ohio River Valley were floating their produce down the Mississippi River to New Orleans. They sold their flatboats for lumber, and the path now known as the Natchez Trace provided a good route back home. The introduction of steamboats encouraged return travel by river, and the Trace lost much of its traffic. Historic sites, trails, and picnic areas are located along the Natchez Trace, which passes through Lawrence County.

Stones River National Battlefield

Here was one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil War, December 31, 1862, to January 2, 1863.

Within the park are the Stones River National Cemetery, which contains more than 6,000 Union graves; Fortress Rosecrans, built by Union troops after the battle; and the Hazen Monument, believed to be the oldest Civil War

Monument. Free admission.

Sunnybell Cedar Glade State Natural AreaTrail of Tears National Historic Trail

In 1838 and 1839, thousands of Cherokees were forced to leave their homes in the southeastern states and move to the territory that would become Oklahoma.

Today highways that closely follow the trail are marked with official markers, and historic sites lie along the trail. Contact the National Park Service and the local Chamber of Commerce for specific information.

Natchez Trace Parkway

In the late 18th and early 19th centuries, settlers in the Ohio River Valley were floating their produce down the Mississippi River to New Orleans. They sold their flatboats for lumber, and the path now known as the Natchez Trace provided a good route back home. The introduction of steamboats encouraged return travel by river, and the Trace lost much of its traffic. Historic sites, trails, and picnic areas are located along the Natchez Trace, which passes through Williamson County.
